

Frankie's Club

46 So. Maine St.
Fallon, Nevada

Frank and Helen McEvoy began a Nevada migration in the early 1950's. From Truckee, California they moved to Hawthorne, Nevada. Around 1953 they again moved to Elko where Frankie practiced his chosen trade as a bartender in the Ranchinn. In the early 1950's, Elko was north eastern Nevada's largest city (still is) and was a center for ranching. Bing Crosby had a ranch in the area and Elko saw its share of movie stars who visited the Crosbys and participated in the local events.

The McEvoy's stayed in Elko until around 1955 when they moved to Fallon, Nevada. Frankie and Helen purchased the Clover Club in 1957 and were granted a gaming license for a crap game and a 21 table on March 29, 1957. The club was a gathering place for locals and Frankie supported local sports teams. Hospitality has always been a Nevada product and Frankie's Club survived for 20 years. Located just north of the Fallon Nugget, Frankie's Club was almost in the geographical center of Fallon. In the first years the club featured live gaming. In later years, slots and pin ball machines were the only form of gaming.

For years the Fallon Nugget had tried to purchase the small club, but Frankie continued to dispense his style of Nevada refreshment and hospitality. Frank McEvoy died in 1977 and the property was finally sold to the Nugget.
